

Personal Information

Katharina Van Meenen-Röhrig grew up at and with GFOS. In 2014, she decided to join the family business, a tech company founded by her father Burkhard Röhrig in 1988. After studying abroad at the University of San Diego, the International College of Management Sydney, and completing her MBA, she was initially a member of the executive board of GFOS mbH.

In 2022, she took over the company together with Dr. Ignace Van Meenen and has since been the chief executive officer and majority shareholder of the GFOS GROUP. Katharina Van Meenen-Röhrig is known as a thought leader in the field of New Work and represents female leadership in an industry that still tends to be dominated by men, thus breaking through the common clichés.

As part of her master's thesis, Katharina Van Meenen-Röhrig worked intensively on the topic of "Industry 4.0 in Germany – The Obstacles Regarding Smart Production in the Manufacturing Industry". With her work, she made an important research contribution to the implementation of Industry 4.0 in Germany. She is now working on her dissertation and developing recommendations for growth and organizational design in German SMEs. In both her professional and academic contexts, Katharina Van Meenen-Röhrig specializes in business development, New Work, digitization, Industry 4.0, and organizational design.
